

SOMEWHAT SKETCHY

And from Various Parts of the State.

The Editorial Jottings of Next Week—The Hancock Farmers—The Rice Planters—Atheism in Athens.

The Georgia editors will take in the country from Canton to Brunswick.

The little mountain city is making great preparations to entertain the visiting editors, who will gather there on the 10th. An excursion through the mountains has been planned, so that the editorial crew may be fanned by alpine breezes. Through the courtesy of the East Tennessee road, the whole party will then be taken through to Brunswick, where fish fries and clam chowders will mark the change from mountain to coast. They will be met there by Colonel William E. Kay, an Atlantaian, who has made himself both heavy and valid in a cot by the sea.

The family figure of Major S. Frank Warren will also greet them. The major has met the editors so often before that they will feel at home immediately in the company of the St. Simons Beach host, which he is to manage for the summer. Major Warren is noted for the manner in which he can dress whole pigs on very short notice, the receipt for which he is to provide to make public on that day, with illustrations.

There appears to be a wonderful tendency in the neighborhood of Mr. P. W. R. in the eastern portion of Hancock, of overproduction. First a cow gave birth to twins, and almost immediately, a lady surprised her husband with a pair of bouncing squallers.

The grand jury the past week created quite a consternation in the western portion of Hamilton county among the colored population. As soon as the riding bailiffs were heard of many of the blacks took to the woods and swamps, and if a bailiff succeeded in serving a subpoena personally upon a black brother he would have a regular deer race. And for the last three days of the week not a black brother could be seen, neither in highways nor hedges. A complete stampede took place as among herds of cattle in the west and away to the swamps headlong they went.

Sid Cook, of the Leary Courier, now pays special visits to Camilla, where there is a brother editor who is the blooming father of six bouncing daughters.

The Waynesboro Citizen is now in its seventh volume. The Citizen is, without comparison, the model local newspaper of Georgia. Not only in the local columns, but in the editorial columns, it discusses home matters with a vigor and freshness which is charming. The editor never descends to small-manned flings, nor does he take the cue from some "big Ike" who assumes to dictate the policy of the county, but he is always bold, free and independent. It would be well if every county in the state had within its limits just such a paper as the Waynesboro Citizen.

The rice crop on the Altamaha is in a flourishing condition, and if the present price of rice is maintained until the crop can be harvested, the rice planters will be able to realize a handsome profit on the season's business.

The rice crop suggests the experience of a lawyer who has several planters for clients. It is a poor plantation, he says, which cannot raise two mortgages a year. The older planters are lavish in expenditures, never figuring on the future, but living high in hope of future prosperity. One planter, however, found it impossible to lift his mortgage, and called upon his lawyer for advice. First he presented the amount of his mortgage, which called for $3,000. Then there were the receipts for sales of rice, which amounted to $4,300. "After deducting what I need to live on," said the planter, "I am short $1,000 necessary to pay off the mortgage." The lawyer looked at the life bill long and earnestly, and at last, putting his finger on one item of $500, asked: "What is this for?" "That is to go to Saratoga, sir; I never miss a trip to Saratoga." Another $500 item was pointed out, when the planter indignantly explained: "That is, sir, the wine and cigars people must live, you know!" And yet it never occurred to this man that he could forego Saratoga, wines and cigars for one year, and thus be released from debt. There is a new class of rice-planters, however, grown up since the war, who are making money. They stay at home, live frugally and husband their resources, and as a consequence are doing well.

The county convention is to have a newspaper of its own, with Editor Huff, of the Wrightsville Headlight, for manager.

Hon. W. B. Berry, of Newnan is rich in reminiscences of the times when wigs and democrats were "striving mightily" for the ascendancy. One of his best stories is as follows: When the Atlanta and West Point railroad was built pent strata was at its height. Those in charge of the building and the men of the line which ran through Coveta were of the opinion that a promising wild stripe that fought for whiskey by day and dreamed of it by night. They decided that the road should be a wild road, and that it should not be defined by running through the lands of any Democrat. So they surveyed a route, and marked it out, and when the work was done it was found that from Palmetto to Newnan—a distance of fourteen miles—they had run through the land of but one democrat, and as he happened to be a mild sort of partisan and rather hard to surround, "they didn't count that," as Bip Van Winkle would say.

And so the road runs to this day.

Calhoun would be a good location for a chair factory. Timber of the right kind is abundant, and easy to obtain.

Milt Farmer, who stands out as a conspicuous landmark of the pioneer days of Hart county, is a veteran soldier of two wars, and was wounded in both of them. At the age of eighteen he was a soldier in the Florida war with the Seminoles Indians, and was wounded slightly on the back of his head. He says he saw Generals Scott and Jackson frequently, and that the former patted him on the head and called him "My brave young soldier." General Scott didn't let him ride his horse, however. Milt was a gallant soldier in the confederate army, and received a fearful wound on the top of his head at the siege of Petersburg. A piece of skull bone an inch and a half square was taken out. The hole is large enough to hide a man's thumb in. He says the surgeon hunted for a silver half dollar with which to make a silver cap to fit over his brain but failed, so he is minus a half dollar. Milt, though past his allotted three score and ten, is still half and vigorous.

Blackberries are ripening.

There are 400 grangers and 300 alliance men in Harris county.

The Waycross Reporter says:

Henry Wickliffe has been supplying the market here with some of the finest cabbage ever made in this section, and the other day we asked him how much land he had planted and what the crop netted him. He said, "I planted a little less than a quarter of an acre and needed about $100, besides using all my family and needed home."

We remarked that there was less in truck farming, and he responded, "I have planted the same ground now in sugar cane, and with good seasons I expect to make as much more this year on the same land." This shows clearly what may be done right here in this section on a man only makes the effort in the right direction. We want to see and hear more of our farmers.

Near Midville on Monday the colored Baptist church was burned. The members of this church suspect some of their Methodist brethren of being guilty of this little diversion. There has been a revival in the Baptist church, and some of the Methodist flock have wandered from their fold and have been wading in the Baptist waters, hence the green-eyed monster resorted to the torch as a means to stop the mischief.

The eighty-ninth birthday of the venerable Mrs. Nancy Ferrell, many of whose large descendants, live in and near LaGrange, was made the occasion of a big family dining at the residence of Colonel J. H. Fannin, her son-in-law. A number of friends called on the venerable lady during the afternoon. Mrs. Ferrell was born in 1793, in Lenoir County, N. C. She was the daughter of Colonel Benjamin Colquitt, who was a school teacher in Newbern, that state, when the British entered it. Her mother died in 1812. She and her husband, Mr. Micklesberry Ferrell, moved from Jones county to LaGrange in 1822. He died in 1861, while on a visit to his daughter in Louisiana. Mrs. Ferrell is partially blind and deaf, but her health is pretty good and her mind is vigorous. Her knowledge of the Scriptures, which have been a life-long study with her, is phenomenal. Though she can no longer read, she is able to repeat whole chapters of the sacred Book. Her memory, particularly, is strong and active, and she delights in reminiscences of the long ago. Better than all, she is a devout Christian, only awaiting the indication of God's will. To use her own words: "I want to be just ready to go when He shall call me. I desire to glorify Him."

The following resolution was offered by William Peeples, in the Gwinnett county democratic meeting, and adopted: That we depurate any division in our ranks upon the basis of religion. The purpose of the party next November, and the holding of the convention in the hands of our friends for the next four years is of infinitely more importance than the scission of any party of taxation.

The May meeting of the Hancock Farmer's club had quite an unusual attendance, including a large number of ladies. The president, Hon. W. N. Northen, being absent in Athens, Vice President John Turner presided. The principal subject discussed was the imminent move, and the club unanimously favored taking advantage of it by doing all possible to advertise the county through the northwest. A committee was appointed, consisting of Messrs. John Turner, S. D. Rogers, John R. Woods and R. B. Harter, to prepare a pamphlet descriptive of the soil, climate, and products of the county, to be sent to the northwest, along with the display to be carried by Mr. Gleason, and then by him to the state convention.

No detail was omitted, and the club unanimously favored carrying on the work of the committee.

Quite a number of company G., of the Ninth Georgia regiment, Colquitt's brigade, met in McDonough Tuesday, for the purpose of affecting an organization of the regiment in order to hold a reunion some time during the summer. Several enthusiastic speeches were made during the meeting. All of the old regiment now living are requested to communicate with Lieutenant H. H. Kelley, at White House, Ga., in order to assist in the organization.

The article which appeared in Saturday's Constitution headed "Athens Atheism" is declared to be without foundation. Mr. L. M. Brand writes:

A careful investigation has been instituted and not one can find a single trace of such an organization.

It is for this reason that the court is to award an infamous punishment, not whether the punishment is actually awarded.

The information is that the trial will be held in the city of Atlanta, and the court is to award an infamous punishment, not whether the punishment is actually awarded.

In the circuit court the judges were divided in opinion upon several questions of law and among them the following: "Whether the crime was infamous within the meaning of the constitution of the United States, as when the defendant was to be tried for treason rather than on a capital or indictable offense of the grand jury?" These questions were certified to the supreme court. Mr. Justice Gray, for the court, quoting that clause of the 8th amendment to the constitution which declares "that no person shall be held to answer a capital or otherwise infamous crime, unless on a presentment or indictment of a grand jury." This question is of great importance and the court's answer will be of great interest.

These informations are chiefly used to prosecute violations of the internal revenue laws. All cases of distilling, carrying on the business of a retail or wholesale liquor dealer, manufacturing stills, rectifying, and other distilled liquors, on which the tax has not been paid, and, in fact, a large proportion of the crimes against the general government for the violation of internal revenue laws are prosecuted in this manner. These facts are stated the most of the question may be perceived.

The trial will be held in the northwest, and the court's answer will be of great interest.

The Colored Vote Dividing.

The republican party of the north will never understand the true condition of affairs in the south until it is forced to recognize the fact that every negro vote in the south does not necessarily represent a republican vote.

The following, from the St. Louis Globe-Democrat, shows that estimable republican contemporary is laboring, as it has been for many years, under this misapprehension. The Globe-Democrat, in referring to the Louisiana election, says:

The New Orleans democratic journals declare that it was the negro vote which gave Louisians to the border and the mountains. The negroes were not balloted this year, nor were they so indifferent as to stay away from the polls. The colored brother, indeed, impressed with the importance of the contest, turned out in full force and vote—the democratic ticket. This tale may be true, but all the same, the average Caucasian outside the state will be skeptical on that point.

We have no doubt but that the republican party is skeptical on the points presented by the Globe-Democrat, and it would be strange if it were not so. The republicans have been taught for many years that the negroes of the south naturally belonged to their party; and whatever skepticism they now have, on finding that the colored vote is dividing, is due to the fact that they actually believe that the colored people of the south are bound, hand and foot, to the republican party, and that no circumstances can arise which will ever shake their allegiance to that party.

Just here the republican party will find itself seriously mistaken. Every election held in the south increases the number of colored democratic voters. Of course, the republican party will not believe that the negroes are not balloted at all, because it refuses to accept evidence to the contrary, and really is opposed to having this idol of the party shattered. This faith is one of the chief points of republican belief, and to have it shaken would be to seriously interfere with the policy of the party.

Nevertheless, the negroes of the south are realizing the more, each day, that it is not on the republican but the democratic party that they must depend for their future welfare. They are slaves no longer to the republican party, and they are beginning to exercise their rights as freemen.

The position of Senator Brown, as outlined in our Washington dispatches yesterday, is the position of every protection democrat in the country. Party harmony is more important than the tariff. The retention of the democratic party in power is essential to any and every reform.

Bumstead and Whittier.

Our esteemed friend, Whittier, who is a philanthropist as well as a tuneful poet, has written a letter to Mr. Horace Bumstead in regard to the supposed extremity in which the Atlanta university finds itself in consequence of its refusal to conform to the laws of the state of Georgia.

On account of this refusal the annual appropriation of $8,000, made by the state, will be withdrawn from the resources of the university. The esteemed poet seems to think that this is a serious matter so far as the university is concerned, but he is sadly mistaken. The withdrawal is a very good thing for negro education; it is, in fact, a regular windfall, as the boys say. The $8,000 which has been withdrawn from the university will fall into the lap of some deserving negro institution in the state, or into the laps of several, while Mr. Bumstead will be able, by dwelling on the supposed political reasons that brought about the withdrawal, to raise the wind much more effectively than John E. Bryant did when he was milking the retired merchants of Rhode Island for funds with which to educate the southern whites.

Bumstead has a much bigger thing to the purloins of Rhode Island. The whole wide north is his, and it is to be hoped he will raise as much money as he can conveniently tote. Meanwhile, the annual appropriation of $8,000 will go towards the maintenance of some institution where only negroes will receive the benefit of it, and nobody will be hurt.

We mention these facts for the information of our esteemed friend Whittier, who might be able to compose a lively ditty on the subject, showing that all things work for the good of everything else.

The troubles of Mr. John Sherman have just begun. It is said that Foraker is making arrangements to succeed him in the senate.

PRINCE BISMARCK refused to be made a duke. He is already bigger than a duke.

Metropolitan Journalism.

The conflict between our esteemed metropolitan contemporaries continues with unabated fury. They agree on charging four cents apiece for their Sunday papers, but they agree on nothing else. Quite recently, the New York Sun accused Editor Pulitzer, of the World, of owning a building in which gambling is carried on.

Editor Pulitzer replied that he had never entered the building in question, had signed none of the leases, and knew nothing of the character of the business carried on under its roof. He remarked, further, that he had fewer facilities for knowing what was going on in the building than the Sun's reporters, and if they had inadvertently lost any money during the course of their investigations, he was not to be held responsible therefor.

This seems, at first glance, to be a very neat reply, but it is not genuinely metropolitan in tone. It would have been better if Editor Pulitzer had come out and declared that Editor Dana has been for many years engaged in running a Turkish bath establishment, with manicure parlors attached. What the country wants is lively reading, and it depends on the metropolitan journals for this sort of pabulum.

This reminds us that Colonel Elliott Shepard, the celebrated religious editor of the Mail and Express, has been the subject of some comment on the part of his esteemed metropolitan contemporaries. He is charged not only with placing extracts from the Bible at the head of his editorial columns, but also with bearing the stock of the Fifth Avenue Transportation company, in order to buy in its stock.

These charges have caused the colonel to explain. He prints scripture texts, he says, in order that "the words of our Father in Heaven may go with the people when they go in the ordinary daily walks of life."

THE NEW YORK TIMES appears to be stuck on Governor Hill. It should stick to Hill and join the republican party.

A NOVEL LAWSUIT has been begun in Beaver Falls, Pa. The Tribune of that place made the announcement that "J. L. Greenham, better known as Gilhooly, has improved the appearance of his property by a neat coat of paint." Mr. Greenham was so indignant at being alighted to as Gilhooly, even facetiously, that he brought suit against the Tribune for damages. Mr. Greenham is supersensitive.

THE CINCINNATI ENQUIRER heads its account of the Voorhees-Ingraham debate "Roasting Match." Roasted chestnuts!

THE MEMPHIS AVALANCHE wants west Tennessee, east Arkansas, north Alabama, north Mississippi, and western Kentucky to join together and form a state to be called Tennessee-Kalanis. The name seems to get there, whatever may be thought of the proposition.

A Terrible Tragedy.

The prohibition excitement bids fair to turn Mississippi into a dark and bloody ground.

In yesterday's issue we gave a brief account of the shooting affair at Jackson, in which both parties to the difficulty, Mr. John H. Martin and General Wirt Adams, were killed.

This turns out to be one of the many tragedies growing out of the famous Hamilton-Gambrell case. It appears that young Martin, the editor of the Jackson New Mississippian, espoused the cause of Gambrell, and in common with other prohibitionists harbored great animosity against those who took the side of Hamilton. When Hamilton's trial came on, General Adams, the postmaster of Jackson, was summoned to testify as to the character of the accused as observed by him during an acquaintance dating back to 1842. After he had given his testimony, Martin pitched into him in his office:

"General Wirt Adams, a witness for the defense, testifies as to Hamilton's character. The general ought to remember that character, like charity, should begin at home." "Nellie" Dixie's testimony for the state has been impeached, but she has given evidence for the defense; she never gave certificates and was forced, after they had been published a year, to admit they were utterly false."

And again today: "People who do not receive the New Mississippi regulars will please remember that General Wirt Adams' postoffice is endeavoring to wreck its spite against this paper in every possible way. The paper has to be in the postoffice about a half an hour sooner than the republican paper. They are slaves no longer to the republican party, and they are beginning to exercise their rights as freemen."

General Adams, when he next met Martin, spoke to him in rather strong language about these paragraphs, and Martin drew his pistol and fired. The general was not slow in following suit, and our readers know the result.

General Adams was about seventy years old. He fought gallantly in the early Indian wars of the southwest, served in the legislature, was confederate commissioner to Louisiana, and was once offered the postmaster-general of the confederacy. During the war he made a brilliant reputation as an able and daring confederate general. He was appointed postmaster at Jackson shortly after President Cleveland was inaugurated. Of Martin but little is known. He was a hot-headed young man, a rabid prohibitionist, and the enemy of all who agreed with General Adams in the belief that Hamilton was innocent of the murder of Gambrell.

This lamentable tragedy is stirring up the entire southwest. The New Orleans Times-Democrat says of it:

Every citizen of New Orleans will hear with deep sorrow of the killing in Jackson yesterday of General Wirt Adams, one of the most illustrious citizens of Mississippi. No Mississippian was better known here than General Adams; he was a frequent visitor to this city; he was the ambassador sent by our sister state of Mississippi to induce Louisiana to join it in the confederacy. He was a gallant commanding general during the war, and few men outside of Louisiana were so united by many bonds to it and its people. A man of honor and courage, public-spirited, determined and active. General Adams had proven a valuable citizen of Mississippi during the many years he resided here, and served the cause of the South with a spirit of self-sacrifice.

What Thirty Cents Did With Jersey Calves.

ATLANTA, Ga., May 1.—Editor Constitution: Last Sunday I put a thirty cents (three lire) notice in your "ten cent pages" offering Jersey calves for sale. Before noon Monday I had sold them to W. H. I never put a ten cent line in your paper, which has since inundated the world with unbound opulence and bankruptcy to turn.

The Horse Guard Tilt and Contest Yesterday.

The First and Second Teams to Represent the Company Are Chosen—Some Excellent Tilling Displayed.

Yesterday afternoon at the tilting court on Capitol avenue the first and second teams of the Governor's Horse Guard were chosen to represent the company in the coming cavalry tournament.

Quite a number of ladies and gentlemen were present to see the tilting, and the records made were remarkably fine.

After the judges had all taken their stations the contestants were formed in line, and as the horses were called in procession, one trooper after another would dash down the course, striking with his sabre at the heads and rings as he went at a full gallop. The contestants were Messrs. Beatie, Jones, Allen, Candler, Benson, Dozier, Stewart, Bentine, Miller and Morris. Each horseman had three runs, and the judges then met and made the selections. The first team are Beatie, Dozier, Miller and Allen. The second team are Benson, Bentine, Stewart and Jones.

Each member of the company, active, exempt or honorary, will be provided with an elegant orange colored badge, fringed with gold, and the colors of the company for the tournament will be orange, red and blue.

Captain Millidge requests that the badges be worn, and the colors displayed at the homes of the men from Monday morning until Thursday night for the convenience and guidance of the visiting troops. The badge will consist of the colors of the company and decorated with the motto, "Truth, Honor, Integrity, Loyalty, Courage, and Integrity."

This will be testimony to the coronation will be for sale today at Miller's.

The First Paper Money.

EDITORS CONSTITUTION: When and where did the first paper money originate?

THE FRENCH GOVERNMENT seems disposed to back DeLoesps in his Panama canal scheme. The consequences will directly affect our interests.

THE SPANISH GOVERNMENT has been impeached, but she has given evidence for the defense; she never gave certificates and was forced, after they had been published a year, to admit they were utterly false."

"We are in earnest, Mr. Adams," said a distinguished Alabamian yesterday, "when we speak of the missing of what some day will be a great city. It is what is known as Big Stone Gap, and is situated on Powell river. The property is owned by a syndicate headed by Mr. John H. Inman. The climate is the healthiest possible, the water is the best and there is plenty of coal and ore. Eight railroads center that way and the region has everything in its favor. Georgia and Alabama won't think they have everything, for old Virginia is going to be beat.

It looks very much as if Birmingham's going to leave the Honduras Steel company. In a recent talk with a Herald reporter, one of the leading stockholders said as much. The gentlemen interested in the company claim that they are not receiving either the moral or the financial support of the people of Birmingham, and that they are considering a proposal to go elsewhere.

PIGG VANN,

The Man Who Killed White at Summerville,

Has Been Removed to the Jail in Rome for Safe-Keeping—An Interesting Story
—Details of the Crime.

Colonel John R. Towers, who was in the city yesterday, stated that Pig Vann, the man who killed G. C. White, the mail-carrier, at Summerville on last Tuesday afternoon, has been removed from the jail at Summerville to the jail at Rome for safe keeping.

It is reliably stated that Pig Vann and a man named Johnson were in Rome last Monday, and that as soon as the news of Henry Pope's rescue reached that point they at once set out to carry the negro to the jail at Summerville, which place they reached before nightfall.

They got to Summerville, at least two hours before Sheriff Moore of Floyd, who left Rome at noon in a hack and drove rapidly.

A short time before one o'clock Tuesday afternoon, Vann, White, and all came to the jail, and was attending to his horse in his stable at Summerville, a number of disguised men passed by this stable. White recognized several of the party who are supposed to have been part of the lynching party, and he had a hand in the lynching of the negro who took his horse.

It is thought these men saw and recognized White in his stable, but there is no proof of it, as lynches are not in the habit of exposing themselves, and dead men tell no tales.

Lynching took place in the day upon which the lynching of Vann had occurred.

White was shot in the head, and died in the jail at Summerville, and a quarrel ensued which resulted in Vann drawing his pistol and shooting White.

The first report of the killing, which reached Rome Monday afternoon, was to the effect that Vann had been killed because he had been a member of the gang that lynched White.

Rome Monday afternoon, was to the effect that Vann had been killed because he had been a member of the gang that lynched White.

White was shot in the head, and died in the jail at Summerville, and a quarrel ensued which resulted in Vann drawing his pistol and shooting White.

The removal of Vann to Rome for safe keeping may mean an attempt to get him out of the country, or to prevent his friends from rescuing him from the hands of the law. Good people in Rome assert that White was a sober, steady, inoffensive citizen and say that Vann is a drinking man of desperate character.
